Climate	Venezuela is an ecotraveler's paradise. It is a land of many contrasts: Amazonian rain forests; La Gran Sabana with its Tepuys, reputed to be among the oldest rock formations on Earth; waterfalls, including Angel Falls, the world's highest at 3200 feet; high Andean mountains with peaks reaching more than 16,000 feet and with the world's largest cable car; spectacular birds and wildlife in the Great Plains of "Los Llanos"; and the crystal clear waters of the Caribbean surrounding Venezuela's uninhabited islands along more than 1800 miles of coastline. Venezuela is blessed with incredible tropical biodiversity. In a country roughly the size of Texas (916.445 km²), nearly 1,300 species of birds can be found, 44% of the total species found in all of South America and a remarkable 1/6 of the world's recorded species. In addition, there are 30,000 recorded species of flowering plants as well as exotic wildlife, from monkeys, caimans, capybaras, jaguars, and tigers to giant anteaters and tropical snakes. The climate varies according to altitude. Lowland areas have a tropical climate. The dry season is from December to April and the rainy season from May to December. It seems hard sometimes to differentiate seasons due to protecting mountains that lay along the coast line and that help to reduce the impact of Caribbean tropical storms. Caracas is a valley situated at the north of the country. Temperatures vary from an average night temperature of 23°C to daytime temperature of 33°C.
Clothing – what to wear	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ■ For daytime clothing you need: t-shirts, jeans, sport shoes, and sweaters (offices and stores usually have really cold air conditioning). Remember your umbrella or rain coat. ■ For the evening and events: we recommend bringing more formal clothes for the evening. An important number of nightclubs and discos have a standard dress code. We recommend you bring at least a couple of trousers and some formal shirts. ■ For the beach: shorts, t-shirts, sandals, and sport shoes. ■ For the mountains and rain forest: jeans, sweaters, coat, and sport shoes.
